

Dear Sirs and Madams:

Wisconsin's state legislators, as representatives of the people of Wisconsin, wisely provided strong rules regarding telemarketing calls. It is estimated that 80% of households in the state signed up for this service, indicating the level of support for the program. It would be a disservice to the people of Wisconsin (as well as being antithetical to states' rights) for the FCC to strike down or weaken this piece of consumer protection under pressure from the telemarketers and their representatives.

Thank you for your attention in this matter.
